Private Dining in the Krug Room

The Krug Room is without doubt one of the most exciting dining rooms in London. Located within the hotel's master kitchens, it is the original 'chef's table' and was first opened in the 1940's. Renovated in 2003, it is now a sleek, stylish and contemporary space with a wall of opaque glass that becomes transparent at the flick of a switch. Diners descend into one of London's largest kitchens and can marvel at the spectacle of watching some of The Dorchester's 100 chefs at work from the comfort of a private dining room.

The Krug Room can seat up to twelve guests on deep-red leather chairs around a specially commissioned glass table while they enjoy a menu designed specially for them by the hotel's Executive Chef, Henry Brosi. Whether it be a 3-course lunch or a 10-course degustation dinner.

Fifty

This magnificent, landmark venue with its colourful history and rich heritage has always endeavoured to take gaming and entertainment to a new level. First opened in 1827 by a flamboyant entrepreneur of the day, the casino at 50 St James Street was designed by the fashionable architect Benjamin Wyatt, and quickly became known as "the Ascot of gambling" or "the most talked about gambling hall in the most talked about street in the most talked about city in the world."

Fifty offer's not just a spectacular gaming room and excellent private gambling facilities, but also four floors of sophisticated, upscale bars and restaurants, a club lounge, Fifty Below where the ambience and décor complements gamblers and non-gamblers alike.
